SAMPLE WORKS CITED ENTRIES: FILM AND OTHER NONPRINT MEDIA

In addition to print and online resources, you may also be using a videotape, DVD, or other media as part of the research material for your paper. Sometimes, you may even use a live performance or television program as a source. Here are some sample entries to demonstrate how to handle these types of sources.

1. Films, Videos, and DVDs

Entries for films begin with the title of the film, underlined, followed by the director’s name, the distributor, and the year of the film’s release. You may also include other key information, such as names of the lead actors, between the title and the distributor.

To cite a videotape of a film, include the original release date and the medium before the name of the distributor.

The format for DVDs is parallel to that for a videotape:

2. Television Programs

In your works cited list, to reference a television program, use the following elements, in order: title of the episode (if any), in quotation marks; title of the program, underlined; title of the series (if any); name of the network; call letters and city of the local station; broadcast date.

3. Live Performances

Entries for live performances (plays, concerts, ballets, etc.) begin with the title and generally follow the format for films (see above). Include the site and date of the performance at the end of the listing.
SAMPLE WORKS CITED ENTRIES: FILM AND OTHER NONPRINT MEDIA

In addition to print and online resources, you may also be using a videotape, DVD, or other media as part of the research material for your paper. Sometimes, you may even use a live performance or television program as a source. Here are some sample entries to demonstrate how to handle these types of sources.

1. Films, Videos, and DVDs

Entries for films begin with the title of the film, underlined, followed by the director’s name, the distributor, and the year of the film’s release. You may also include other key information, such as names of the lead actors, between the title and the distributor.

To cite a videotape of a film, include the original release date and the medium before the name of the distributor.

The format for DVDs is parallel to that for a videotape:

2. Television Programs

In your works cited list, to reference a television program, use the following elements, in order: title of the episode (if any), in quotation marks; title of the program, underlined; title of the series (if any); name of the network; call letters and city of the local station; broadcast date.

3. Live Performances

Entries for live performances (plays, concerts, ballets, etc.) begin with the title and generally follow the format for films (see above). Include the site and date of the performance at the end of the listing.

SAMPLE WORKS CITED ENTRIES: FILM AND OTHER NONPRINT MEDIA

In addition to print and online resources, you may also be using a videotape, DVD, or other media as part of the research material for your paper. Sometimes, you may even use a live performance or television program as a source. Here are some sample entries to demonstrate how to handle these types of sources.

1. Films, Videos, and DVDs

Entries for films begin with the title of the film, underlined, followed by the director’s name, the distributor, and the year of the film’s release. You may also include other key information, such as names of the lead actors, between the title and the distributor.

To cite a videotape of a film, include the original release date and the medium before the name of the distributor.

The format for DVDs is parallel to that for a videotape:

2. Television Programs

In your works cited list, to reference a television program, use the following elements, in order: title of the episode (if any), in quotation marks; title of the program, underlined; title of the series (if any); name of the network; call letters and city of the local station; broadcast date.

3. Live Performances

Entries for live performances (plays, concerts, ballets, etc.) begin with the title and generally follow the format for films (see above). Include the site and date of the performance at the end of the listing.